Here are just a few ideas Finally, the RMR refers to the number of calories the body needs to run its essential functions, as well as chemical reactions while in a rested state. This aspect of metabolism accounts for the greatest number of calories burned every day. What happens is that if lean weight should be lost because of increased protein metabolism, then RMR decreases. Typically, you would see this happen when a person goes on a very strict diet. In this situation, the body is forced into a negative nitrogen balance, which means a greater amount of protein is lost than what is replaced because of less proteinenergy intake.

When this imbalance occurs, there is a gradual loss of lean weight, which then lowers RMR. Rights - whether moral or legal - impose obligations or duties on third parties towards the right-holder.
